PRESS RELEASE

White Rose Theatre for Belt Up presents Lost Soul Music

by Chris Bush

Deliciously different tales of dalliance and damnation

In 2007, White Rose Theatre's Tony! The Blair Musical was one of the biggest hits of the Edinburgh Festival Fringe, selling out its entire run and earning a string of rave reviews and international plaudits. After Edinburgh, Tony! transferred to London as winner of the Sunday Times NSDF Edinburgh Competition, where it was No.1 in the Sunday Times Culture Agenda and pick of the day in the Evening Standard

Now White Rose returns to C venues this August with a series of darkly intimate, devilishly funny new shows. Come hear our lost soul's stories, each one a deliciously different tale of dalliance and damnation. From one-man monologues to musical spectaculars, Lost Soul Music runs the gamut of theatricality. Sometimes comic, sometimes touching, always entertaining, they present a Talking Heads for the burlesque generation.

Whether you sold it for a song, sacrificed it for the woman you loved or simply lost it in the post, we promise after one visit to C venue's Red Room, you'll never see your soul in quite the same light again. What's more, we're sure we'll have you coming back for more. White Rose Theatre is delighted to be working with Belt Up (Nothing to See/Hear) on their Red Room project, an immersive new performance space located in C central.

'Sharp and Slick - they hit their targets with unerring accuracy'

Robert Dawson Scott, The Times

'A showcase oozing vibrant intelligence, talent and wit'

Louise Hill, British Theatre Guide

'Sharp, engaging, original and terrifically well performed, there just aren't enough positive words to say about this production'

Rachael Wade, BBC
